The IBM SOA Catalog

- IBM's New SOA Business Catalog Offers Comprehensive Resource of Reusable IT Assets to Accelerate SOA Adoption

Paris, 13 June, 2006 IBM today announced that its comprehensive resource to find reusable IT services based on IBM and IBM Business Partner software is now available. The IBM SOA Business Catalog allows customers to search for information on service oriented architecture (SOA) assets or IT "services," combinations of software code, intellectual property and best practices, used to solve specific business problems. Recent studies have shown that reusing existing assets can help build an SOA up to five times faster.

By the end of the year IBM's SOA Business Catalog is expected to include more than 3,000 SOA assets spanning more than 15 industries to solve specific business problems. The Catalog directs customers to the appropriate IBM or qualified business partner software including process templates, web services, tools and adapters along with details on how customers can easily obtain and integrate these IT services into existing IT infrastructures.

"IBM's SOA Business Catalog delivers on the promise of reusing IT components" said Sandy Carter, vice president WebSphere and SOA, IBM. "The ability to find and obtain detailed information on specific qualified IBM and IBM Business Partner assets -and reuse those assets time and again-will enable customers to use and SOA to cut costs and increase revenue faster than developing individual IT services over and over again."
